

When You Have an Accident

Whether it is today, tomorrow, next year or ten years down the line, it's an unfortunate fact that accidents may and do happen. While many solicitors offer a personal injury service, few have the scope to deliver on a wide variety of cases, particularly those involving really serious injury. Stephensons is different. Whilst we also deal with cases involving relatively straightforward injuries, it is as specialists in serious personal injury incidents that we stand out.

We can help with

Motor and transport accidents

We can help drivers, passengers and pedestrians who have been injured through no fault of their own in a road or other transport accident. We are particularly experienced in helping drivers to get back on the road as soon as possible.

Accidents at work

Because accidents at work can be particularly complicated, we have specialists who concentrate on this area. Our specialisation enables us to provide advice no matter what type of work environment is involved, the nature or cause of the injury and whoever is responsible, including employers, other employees and contractors.

Work-related diseases

If you are suffering a medical complaint caused by working conditions, our team of specialist lawyers can fight on your behalf to claim the financial awards you need to adjust to the future. Our expertise covers conditions such as asbestosis and respiratory diseases, noise and induced hearing loss, vibration white finger and dermatitis.

Serious injuries and fatal diseases

Whilst every individual case causes problems, a serious personal injury or death is particularly distressing and will have major implications for the victim or surviving family members. We have specialists dealing in permanent injuries such as brain damage, head and spinal injuries and situations involving loss of limb or psychiatric injury and can help investigate the cause of fatal accidents. Taking an all-round view, we provide practical support and assistance to help you adapt to a dramatically altered lifestyle.
