

Motoring Offences

Motoring offences are a common occurrence and a particular hazard for business people on the move. Sometimes the offence may be minor; other times it could be far more serious, with potentially devastating consequences. From speeding to drink-driving, minor accidents to fatal collisions, if you have committed a motoring offence you will need sound legal advice - and you may need it fast. We have decades of experience in this area, making Stephsons the firm to call if you need a defence lawyer.

We can help with

Minor motoring offences

If you have been summoned to court after committing an offence such as speeding, you may need legal help, especially if you face disqualification. We can provide you with information on the likely outcome of your case and advise you on the best course of action to take. Where necessary, we will defend you in court.
